COMING SEVERE TEST OF MARKET

Russian Disorders and Municipal Campaign Makes Wall Street Traders Wary.

PRICES ARE AFFECTED

Standard of Commercial Morality Must Be Raised Before Securities Advance.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.-There is every likelihood that the stability of the spec ulative market will be put to some se vere tests in the immediate present and near future. How severe these will be and how long continued it is impossible to say. That depends largely upon the outcome of the Russian disorders, whether they develop into revolution and anarchy or pass away as the uprising did in January as a disconcerting, though actually harmless, event but, while the Russian situation and its influence on the world's money market is the most important factors with which the im-mediate market must deal, it is not the one. Both the local municipal campaigns, with its present powerful drift toward socialism, and the immediate money mar-socialism, and the immediate money market, are also calculated to test the speculative market's strength.

Whether the recent casing in money rates marks a definite tendency toward retaxation at this time or has been induced by some special and temporary causes should in part be determined this coming week. To many persons it has seemed entirely anomalous that money rates should have relaxed to such a degree here, in view of the high money and discount rates abroad and the very metagre cash reserves and tremendous obligations of the local financial conditions. It is not at all unlikely that there may be some revision of opinion as to the money market, as a result of the calling and shifting of loans attendant upon the November disbursements and the transaction in the Japanese money. It is not to be inferred that the latter sum is to be immediately shipped out of the country. But, whereas now no reserves whatsoever are maintained against it by the private banking firm which has been londing it in the street, when the amount is called and redeposited with the banks and trust companies of the city, there will be the necessity of maintaining reserves against such proportion of the money as deposited in the upon the November disbursements and portion of the money as deposited in the banks.

It is really not a very high compliment that plays to the prevailing banking system of New York that in figuring upon money deposited in institutions one has to differentiate in estimating the possible contraction of loanable funds between institutions that maintain reserves and other institutions doing an identical business which maintain no reserves at all, or practically none. or practically none.
It is to be hoped that the modern theory

It is to be hoped that the modern theory of banking, which dispenses with eash reserves and substitutes call loans, as a basis of protection against any unusual demand, may not be seriously tested at this time. The market and the banking position does not seem to be any too strong to enable the community to stand calmly by if an experiment of the workings of this theory should become necessary. In view of the week's developments it is difficult to conceive of a more foolish or ill-timed speculative movement than that inaugurated about ten days ago in the "Specialties" of the industrial list and stimulated by all manner of manipulative tricks and devices, the marking up of high grade issues to reckless figures, the "churning" and "washing" of pool and clique securities already insised to a figure that had placed them beyond the reach of the prudence.

If the red flag of socialism is displayed, it is primary, because the black flag of bribery, corruption and "graft"—a comparatively new name, this, for stealing—has been displayed at the masthead. We may talk as we will about our great prosperity and our destiny as a nation, but the country has got to raise its standard of political morality and commercial morality and individual raise its standard of political morality and commercial morality and individual morality and unite in concentrated effort reap the benefits of its wonderful nat-reap the benefits of its wonderful natural resources.

Men case-hardened to the prevailing corruption in political and corporate affairs may accept the low standards of morality nd unite in concentrated effort to raise security prices or further other enterprises, but those stundards will assuredly not be adopted by the masses of the community. If one thing is clearer than another concerning Wall Street, it assuredly is that the public has played practically no part in the advancing security market, which dates approximately from the day that the Equitable Life Assurance Society passed from the control of one individual by purchase to another.

Disquieting News Influences Speculators to Flutter About.

THINKERS CAN SEE NO CAUSE

Calm Critics Claim That the Same Condition Prevailed After Crimean War.

(Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch and New York Herald.) (Copyright, by the New York Horald Co.) LONDON, October 20.—Though I wrote last week that cautious operators did not place much reliance on the upward rush which had taken place, and that no permanent improvement could be expected on this side of the New Year, yet hardly anybody was prepared for such another complete change in sentiment as has again taken place. The fact of the matter is merely that every section of the Stock Exchange is plunged into the deepest of gloom or something akin to nervous prostration, the attack was so sudden. The trouble commenced was so sudden. The trouble commenced at once with the opening of an unfor-tunato nineteen-day period, and a heavy dose of liquidation from Puris set every-body in a fluster. On top of this came disquicting news from Russia, and when the time arrived to wind up it was found that Wall Street had also got an attack that Wall Street had also got an attack of the nerves.

The fat was all on fire if one were to

"You take my tip and gell Yanks, for they are bound to go down."

The money market has been in a very straightened condition this week, which is partly owing to the payment for $2,500,000 of treasury bills, and partly because that the joint slock banks have been calling in balances, and also partly owing to the demands of the Slock Exchange settlement in consequence of its lack of resources. The market has been compelled to resort to the Bank of England, which has done a large business in longs and discounts; but taking everything into consideration the conomist considers that that "the best that can be expected, as it may now be with rather more confidence is that that a one per cent, rate has now been made fully effective will conduce to that result, especially when the Russian long is out of the way and the finance institutions of the continent will no longer deem it necessary to keep a tight hand on their balances."

played 'horse' with my little boy, but botween 10 and 11 o'clock' complained of being sick, and said she didn't want to play. She went to her hime, and I hear afterwards that she was dead," said the woman last night to a Times-Dispatch

She showed signs of wanting to vomit, after coming to About 9.20 in the morning. Mrs. Bryant came to my house and left her baby, saying she was going to Broad Street. She came back about 10:15; took her baby and asked Tavia to go with her and mind the baby and go to the store for her. Octavia went with her. Mrs. Bryant had never shown any friendliness for Octavia came home and got no further than the front picch, when sits sat down and said: 'Manima, I'm sick.'

sat down and said: 'Manima, I'm sick.'

From the statement of the Chambers woman it would seem that the child was sick before Mrs. McDowell carried it home, which by the way, Mrs. McDowell denies. And there is also a conflict in the time of day.

This fact together with the statement of the negro woman has given rise to the belief that probably in some details Mrs. Perkins was confused and that the case may not appear so had against Mrs. McDowell, who has been accused of the poisoning of the children and who, the expert says, wrote each of the anonymous letters.

Not Evidence Enough.

Not Evidence Enough.

and who, the expert says, wrote each of the anonymous letters.

Not Evidence Enough.

In so far as the police are concerned the case remains to-day as it was when the coroner's jury returned its verdict Saturday afternoon. The evidence thus far, they do not think, is sufficient to warrant an arrest. For a time it was believed that Mrs. McDowell would be taken into custody and this idea was greatly strengthened when Expert. Build gave it as his positive opinion that she was the writer of the anonymous letters that had been received.

But there is no evidence that Mrs. McDowell, the woman who has been referred to as Mrs. Bryant, had any phosphorus in her home, notwithstanding the fact that one of the anonymous letters was stuck together with the pante. There must be something to establish the guilt of the party accused and the evidence thus far would scarcely stand in court under a severe cross fire, backed up by such additional testimony for the defendant as could be secured by an able attorney.

Mrs. McDowell, who has been recuised of the poisoning, was seen last night by a reporter and said that she had said all about the case that the knew, "I can't help it if the expert did say I wrote those letters, I am innocent," she excludined. And continuing she said, "Mrs. Perkins says that the child was over here Monday and went back sick. She also said that it didn't go anywhere, it certainly came to my house often enough—all of the children did—almost two often. The child was over at Chamber's house Monday, and if you will go over there they'll tell you that it was there almost every day."

The reporter went and found that her statement was correct, as the statement made by the colored woman wif. attest,

At the home of Mrs. Perkins, Mr. Johnson, the grandfather, and Mr. and Mrs. Perkins were found in the sitting room. A small stove made the room very warm, "We have to keep the stove red hot," said Mrs. Perkins were found in the sitting room.
